Head here??

A recent survey of higher education executive leaders found that many institutions have not automated key financial processes, while data security is a common concern, and a significant percentage of colleges and universities are unable to assess the true costs of some of their most important financial transactions.

Document workflows

Our current application process includes automated document workflows, helping to minimize administrative time and processing costs.

28% DISAGREE
72% AGREE

65% DISAGREE
35% AGREE

My accounts receivable processing is automated and does not require employees to manually enter incoming checks/payments into the financial system.
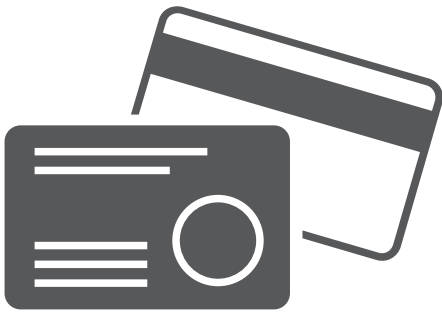

Our accounts payable processing is centralized and does not require employees to manually enter data and route invoices.

61% DISAGREE
39% AGREE

Security concerns

47% AGREE

My institution has concerns about PCI compliance due to our manual processes.

24% AGREE

Data security is a primary reason my school has considered or would consider outsourcing of account receivable processes.

Understanding true costs and fundraising

43% AGREE
57% DISAGREE

My institution has a clear understanding of the true cost to receive and process an invoice.

My institution has a clear understanding of the true cost to collect advancement funds.

50% AGREE
50% DISAGREE

My university is analyzing fundraising data in relationship to accounts receivable to improve the success of future campaigns.

67% AGREE
33% DISAGREE

My institution leverages seasonal/student labor to meet the demands of fundraising.

46% AGREE
54% DISAGREE

[concluding blurb about Ricoh's services with call to action URL, Ricoh logo]

RICOH
imagine. change.